Even though I'm a freelance writer, I still find myself wishing that I had a fast more reliable source of unfettered file access. For years I've been using Dexcom's Dexcom Share app to keep on hand the raw files that I've encountered during the course of my freelance writing, and with that raw material for this past month I was able to write my Dory series for Wired, an eight-part series of stories about the ocean about which I've long been fascinated, but to which I hadn't devoted more than a reader's time that year.
