Start at the beginning

New Earth: The Quest is the perfect strategy game for beginners. At the front end, it is a game about building cities. Every city can be affected by discovering the land on which it is located. The land can be improved (more tiles, road, trees), and this affects the city. Eventually, it can even lead to victory. The game starts directly in the map overview. On this map, you can choose different in-game settings: your size, your victory condition, and your preference for tilt and float options. You can even set different settings for each of the games that you start.

On the right side you have some instructions in various languages including English. The strategy is quick and easy to follow, and the interface is very intuitive. Once you have set your preferences, you can start the game.

What's new:

of the Seas New Earth: The Quest of the Seas is a 2010 American action-fantasy science fiction film directed by Roland Emmerich. The film stars John Cusack and Diane Lane and was released to theaters in 3D on October 23, 2010. The film was originally titled Anima and the final working draft of the script was based on the novel In the Presence of an Angel. Plot Early in the 22nd century, Soviet forces launch a massive invasion on the United States, killing millions of people, destroying major cities and leaving the world in chaos and despair. The world's leaders invent a new energy source, a computerised system of satellites in near-earth orbit called the Internet of Things, to aid communication and safety during disasters and other crises; a group of scientists called The Seven also utilise the IoT in experimental land and naval defence. A few years later, the world's oceans disappear, leaving much of the New World. Chester Devereaux (John Cusack) is an elderly man in Arizona living with his granddaughter Annie (Annie Parisse) and his best friend, Walt (Walt Longmire), who owns a hardware store. Chester was one of the seven scientists who created the Internet of Things along with his wife Mira (Diane Lane), whose name had been changed to Cathryn by the Soviets and who was referred to in the film as the

Dark Portal. Six months after the disaster, Annie receives a message on her cell phone with a video clip that tells her to contact Chester for help. Annie travels to Chester's home, and she and her parents learn that the globe has begun to rise from the sea. They awaken just as Mira mysteriously disappears; they then meet Chester, who transports them to the home of computer scientist Stephanie Fife (Jean Reno), who reveals her identity. Chester, Connie (Dennises Wagner), Tiffany (Jennifer Jason Leigh), and Mandy (Jillian Armenante) (the four scientists who formed the Seven prior to the Great Earthquake) rescue the humans and launch a mission to avoid death by annihilation and/or nuclear war. Mandy, who had been Chester's fiancé, had died while helping to prevent the tsunami, so Chester, with Mira's help, reanimates her body. In New York, Chester meets and falls in love with Quinn Stepanek (Jennifer Beals), a woman whom his friends describe as a freelance news correspondent. Quinn, who is an environmentalist
