A zoo spokeswoman says the tiger was left by its owners on July 20 and was discovered on Wednesday, seven days later. Washington: US President Donald Trump on Tuesday defended the Republicans who back him over criticism that they are hypocrites for supporting tax cuts for the wealthy and lobbyists while denying tax credit programmes to the poor. Trump said business owners and individuals should have their own tax cut. And he remarked that the unemployment was low, despite a job count that showed it is the highest since 1969. "I think anybody that takes a look at the numbers, it's actually very low," the president said at the White House while responding to reporters' questions. The Trump administration is proposing major tax cuts for corporations and the wealthiest Americans to end the Obama administration's post-war tax cuts. Trump's critics charge that the tax breaks are worth much less than he is promising,

What's new:

- The Original Submitted by Russell B I have known of Nun since the mid nineties but this was the first time I had the privilege of sitting down and chatting with him. He was entralling as we bobbed our way through many topics but best of all was his engaging and current style of storytelling. I asked him if he could connect the dots between being an over powered Force man and here we are today over 15 years later not once but twice! We all meet people and they change our lives. We are all fascinated at the music played in coffee shops by those seeking to make a living. Each conversation an insight. Yesterday Nun was a 'Us of It' podcast Producer and as you listen and read, you will understand why we now have 'Stay tuned for the presenters - Russell B and Steve Clarke - as we bring you that knowledge in an hour' on Itunes. Don't take anything for granted... not even this exact moment. NB: Before we go any further there is a comment Nun makes on the podcast which I completely agree with and since it applies to 'Second to Nun' and Russell as a whole, I decided to share it. 'When you join a band you embrace it. You want to be a part of it and you want everyone else in the band to embrace it. So, if "Second to Nun" start telling people "We're not a band, we are a podcast team." and they reject it and you continue on - you are in effect rejecting the band. Because the fact that you do this, the presenter is feeling a little bit of "Oh, now I don't have any friends," because I am internally fighting for myself. As an independent producer you know that unless something comes from the people listening, nobody else is going to do it, including yourself... You know you cannot do it on your own, don't give up on your own.' Born in the Eighties, Russell B and Stephen Clarke began their journey sharing stories around the local pub and then later online. Russell says 'Years passed by as we continued to bring our audiences extra material, ideas and wisdom from a world much wiser than our young ears.' These days the pair cater to a new and younger audience sharing knowledge and ideas with a different demographic. '
