I have already released this free software under the GPL v2 license. I have much content to include in this first version. I would like to know what people think about it. Here is a list of things that I would like to implement in the future: Have more stages. Implement more shooting games. More weapons.

It has been suggested to use optic fiber and a single fiber to send an image from a remotely located light valve to the wall. It has also been suggested to use a small light valve mounted directly to the window frame. For example, the frame of a window can be mounted with its window glass facing up or down. Or the light valve can be mounted on a non-transparent plate placed in the frame of a window. The light valves used in the above referenced systems have a length or width which is larger than the size of a standard electrical outlet. The light valves for the remote system use an optic fiber connection which can be fragile or can fracture from handling and thus is not well suited for a display system which is used in a high traffic area.Vital signs, including blood pressure, temperature, heart rate, breathing rate, and oxygen saturation, are clinically important indicators of a patient's health and well-being. Often, such vital signs can be obtained non-invasively, such as using a sensor that is placed on a patient's body. In some instances, such a sensor is passive, such as a PPG sensor. In other instances, such a sensor may utilize energy transmission, such as through an optical or RF-based transceiver, to transmit data from a sensor through the skin of a patient. In some instances, such a sensor may be coupled to a patch having a connector that can

- DE Raiga DeWitt - Buffalo Bills In the above mock draft, the Vikings land a premier pass rusher in the second round with Alabama's Raiga DeWitt. (USATSI) Rapidly rising draft prospect Raiga DeWitt has dominated not only college football, but now the NFL. However, with an aging Vikings defense and a need at corner, Minnesota needs to draft a safety with their first-round pick. Like most mock drafts, this one has the Vikings selecting Michigan State's Malik McDowell. But there's no doubt that they will address the pass-rushing needs in the second round. Minnesota head coach Mike Zimmer has shown he's a sucker for underrated pass rushers in the past. DeWitt could be the next pick in the Vikings' class of underrated and unheralded defenders. CLICK HERE FOR FULL MMQB MAILBAG This is not the premise for DeWitt taking over to defend the quarterback. He's too good an athlete for that. But he's good enough as a pass rusher that the Vikings are a good fit. Offensive coordinators scheme to get offensive linemen enough time to make plays. But it's the little things like lining up a defender over a tight end, and knowing the right spots in the defense to not give the linebacker the advantage, and knowing where he or she has to drop in pass coverage, that result in big plays. DeWitt figures into that more than any defensive linemen. And a little tape digging on DeWitt by NFL talent evaluators before the draft has created a non-existent consensus on his trajectory as a pass rusher. "The common opinion around the league is that he was the best pass rusher in college football the last five years and second-best last year," said one assistant coach who has spent the past two months inside NFL headquarters scouting DeWitt. "A lot of people thought he was going to be a 2-and-a-half-star (four-year college) prospect, but now that he's been in the combine, he's on everyone's radar." The consensus seems to be that DeWitt "looks like a natural 4-3 defensive end," said another scout, who noted that the NFL is trending away from the traditional 3-4 defensive look. "What you really want at defensive end are good lateral mobility and run,"
