All the methods for creating and setting up the VM is the same, so I created a VM base class and it works. In my main method I create the base VM and a C# object to send the request to the base VM and have that object created. I then want to create two new instances of the same VM class, one and two. Then I want to send a request to two different VMs, one and two, and have both instances return the correct values. This is what I've tried:](#)

```
// Base VM class public class BaseVM { public string Name {get; set;} public BaseVM(string name) { Name = name; } public string GetData() { // Do some stuff here and return a string } } // Instance of the base VM public class TempVM1 : BaseVM { public TempVM1(string name) : base(name) { } public string GetData() { return "Test1"; } } // Instance of the base VM public class TempVM2 : BaseVM { public TempVM2(string name) : base(name) { } public string GetData() { return "Test2"; d41b202975
