Share this post Link to post Share on other sites Even on a non-gaming computer, running Total Game Control does not cause any noticeable performance decrease. In fact, it actually seems to run faster. And it does a good job of quickly detecting, configuring, and saving profiles. This is one of the best programs for controller configuration for Windows I have ever seen. You will never feel like your computer isn't worth using because of the software. I even use this when I connect my games to a 360 controller. I've looked for something like this for a long time, and it does look pretty good. It will be interesting to see if it works with some of the newer releases. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites That's a good note, Sledgehammer. I'll have to try some different games too. Some games have much better support than others. I do think the interface could be improved though. It's not very intuitive, and there could be more settings for profiles. Thanks for sharing it. I'm glad that you're enjoying it. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites I've been using "Total Game Control" for several months now and I must say that it's definitely the best joypad emulator I've seen. It's so easy to use and the
