Q: pstricks: The alignment of text is shifted compared to the figure I have the following pstricks code
`\documentclass[pstricks,border=12]{standalone} \usepackage{pstricks,pst-plot} \begin{document} \psset{alignment=center,clip} \begin{pspicture}showgrid=true(4,1) \psframelinecolor=blue(4,1) \pslinelinewidth=1.5(0.5,1) \pscliporigin={ (0,0) } \psplot[linecolor=blue]{0.5}{1.5}{x+y*y} \end{pspicture} \end{document}` which looks like this: However, I would like the text to be horizontally aligned. Of course, I could manually position the text, but it doesn't look nice. A: In the regular PSTricks documentation at (Page 46) there is an example of a tikz-based alignment of the text:

Lack of association between ABO blood group and primary open-angle glaucoma in a South Indian population. Glaucoma is the second leading cause of blindness. Recent studies have found an association between ABO blood groups and risk of developing primary open-angle glaucoma (POAG). The goal of this study was to evaluate this association in a South Indian population. The ABO blood groups of 80 South Indian patients with POAG (cases) and an equal number of gender- and age-matched subjects (controls) from the same locality were examined and compared. All patients underwent detailed ocular examination, best corrected visual acuity testing, automated perimetry using a SITA standard automated perimetry (SAP) (Humphrey) test, and central visual field testing using the 30-2 full-threshold program of the Humphrey perimeter. ABO blood groups were determined with the antisera of Biorad. The incidence of ABO blood group in both the cases and controls was comparable and was 0.85 (P > 0.05). This study suggests that the association between ABO blood group and POAG may not be evident in the South Indian population.
