He said that the gift program was to recognize the many individuals who were doing outstanding work and were willing to share their expertise and time with the public. Mr. Rathel explained that the gift program started in 1993 and was initially a Colorado gift program. In 1995, a similar gift program was added to the law in Georgia and subsequently the program was transferred to the Health Department. Mr. Rathel discussed the reasons why the gift program was transferred and an update on the program. He provided an update on the application process for the grant, the selection criteria and processes, and the criteria to qualify for the grant. Mr. Rathel said that the application process is a competitive process and involves a review panel, the application review process, and the selection process for the grants. The process for awards begins when the required application is received. Mr. Rathel said that the selection panel is comprised of the Department personnel and the application review panel for the Governor's Office. He said the panel members are each allowed one presentation. The Governor's Office provides the review and selection panel with a list of the applications and the specific criteria and procedures for selecting the awardees. Mr. Rathel said the applicants must describe in detail the activities they will perform in their performance area. He said that the performance area is the area of the program that the applicant is going to do. Mr. Rathel said the grant funds are available to all projects that are in line with the Council's mission, vision, and purpose, including those that are in the mission areas of disease prevention and wellness. Mr. Rathel said the grant awards are based on the following: the percentage of the program's budget, the potential for the grant to be funded, the value of the project and the project's likelihood for the achieving of the project's objective. Mr. Rathel said that the application asks a number of questions on the resources available to complete the project including the availability of funds and the available staff. Mr. Rathel said that the review panel is comprised of three external reviewers. Mr. Rathel explained that the external reviewers are individuals who have met specific criteria in the area of expertise. Mr. Rathel said that the criteria includes experience in the area of expertise and an understanding of the Council's mission, vision, and purpose. Mr. Rathel explained that the selection criteria is to make sure that the applicant is in line with the mission, vision and purpose of the Council and that the grant will enhance the Council's capacity for the achievement of its mission, vision and purpose. Mr. Rathel said that the next step in the process is the award of the grants to the Council. Mr. Rathel explained that the awards will be made on the basis of a written narrative application and a proposal outlining the goals, objectives, activities, and the resources for the project. Mr.
