Just like you, now you have a simple, but real-time-graphics-based client-server application which you can use, to follow-up your magical career, and uncover the missing parts of your puzzle. In this game, your client will have many features (you may think you have enough of them), but it also has some basic features, as:

- Keep in mind, that you have to work in a short time
- You have to decide, who you are going to follow
- Add in your own contacts, who can help you (You may try to chat with them too)
- Select your level, so you can work at it
- Add in the means to your customer in case you have any warning message or detect any observation or anything you have to do. And you should also have to check out what's happening in your special area, for instance:
- Their current location
- Ordering things
- Calling your guys
- Scheduling your next trip

By using this feature in your own client, you can see, who's doing what, what's going on with your own, and so on. There are also a few simple rules for using in:

- Do not use your own phone
- Do not use your own mobile phone
- Do not use your own car
- Never do not use your own driver
- Do not use your own general manager
- Do not ever cheat on yourself
- Not, ever again, use this client for any evil thing

How to Play: Just start playing with it! Here you can find some other, different and very interesting games like these:

Q: When do I need to promote a story-mode quest, versus the dialogue option? I know that to unlock the DLC, you need to have a certain conversation, and to access certain areas in the world, you need to complete certain story quests. These can be done by talking to the quest giver. However, I've had a couple different situations where the quest-giver has been unresponsive, or unavailable, or it just took too long, and I was about to click on that dialogue button, only to realize I could have been getting an easier and more effective result just by following the story quest. When do I need to promote a story quest, versus the dialogue option? For
